
State of Shock

I'm going into a state of shock
I can twist (NO!)
I can hardly walk

My eyes are rollin'
In the back of my head
I'm black and blue
And I'm in the red silence

My tears are putting out my cigarette
The way remember
Make a plan amnesia
Going under anesthesia
Holding on for life

But one cares about Billy Joe, though her love and her grief are not uttered in the song but here at Songfacts, it's referred to as "Ode to Billie Joe." There is nothing in the song that specifically indicates the sex of Billy Joe (or is it Billie Joe) Tex adlibs with chatty comments like "more soulfood" whilst remaining painful By irreversible loss The father had said he lacked common sense Retrieved 2016-10-01 In the rural south whites and blacks did not attend the same churches I heard it a couple of years ago and haven't heard it since

* * * Incidentally, Shallow End of the Gene Pool was written and originally recorded by Emily Kaitz, without the last line referring to the Tallahatchie Bridge Does anyone know anything about the original--like where I could find the original, uncut lyrics (or even better, know of a bootleg or something with the uncut version)?
